They can even comment from where they are using different browsers and apps (such as the iPad). Comments are immediately synced across devices so you or your team can take your work to the next level. You can also save progress and add notes to improve future iterations of the project. You can invite other editors to participate in real-time review, and these users can see and respond in the review process. The entire review process is synchronized so you can see who made any of the comments, and what happens in each review. You have the ability to accept or reject comments for any given file or comment on as many files as necessary. A single comment can be on one file or spread over multiple files. You can also use the camera to send the original photo superimposed by the reviewer. You can also save a snapshot of your document for later review by providing the name. When you later view the file, you'll see all the comments that way, and you can dive deeper into the review process and learn more about comments left by reviewers.
